WARNS AGAINST WAR IN EVENING SERMON

Dr. Edwards Delivers Third of Series, Pleading Pacifism.

Taking the inspired words from the prophet Hosea, wherein that celebrated teacher of Israel predicted, ay, even proclaimed the downfall of his nation, and they shall rise as the whirlwind, as applicable to America's predicament in her preparedness program as a result of the European war, Dr. Edwards at the First M. E. church Sunday night preached another strong sermon against war.

One More Peace Sermon.

The divine forecasted the subject of next Sunday's theme in the announcement that his contemplated sermon to close his series of sermons against war, he would speak on "Two Crosses, Which Will America Take?" Dr. Edwards, in opening his sermon, stated:

"Without the obsession of the military expert, without the schemes of the war trader, without the mouthings of the cheap politician, without the insane scares of the conscienceless editors of the yellow press, and without the cries of the commercial exploiter in foreign lands, this war in Europe would not have happened. And without these there will be no war in America.

"Europe's war was immediately precipitated by the folly of the appeal to force by civilized nations; by the folly of fear that plunged the nations into a wild delirium, without thought of solemn treaties, or honor. And this folly of fear has been the note sounded in this country, turning peaceable folk into militarists and loosing our national purse-strings as never before in our history. Falsehood and cunning and insult and untruth have led the way to suspicion and hatred of one nation by another nation. And all the preparedness of Europe has been a failure in establishing the supremacy of arms in the hands of any one nation."

JOHN KRONWITTER IS HELD BY POLICE

Saloon Man is Accused of Operating Blind Tiger in the Latest Warrant.

John Kronwitter, the cause of the now famous Kronwitter liquor case, was arrested Monday by city police for operating a blind tiger. Harry Struble, health officer, swore to an affidavit stating that Kronwitter has been running his saloon without a city or state license. It was approved by Deputy Pros. James Hennessey. Chief Krieter sent Patrolman Horton Turbush after Kronwitter but he was not to be found.

The city was defeated last week in its charge that Kronwitter was operating a saloon without a city license and was prosecuting him under a city ordinance. However, Special Judge John Schindler decided that it was a state offense and sustained the demurrer filed by the defendants to that effect.

BRINGS RELIGION INTO CAMPAIGN

G. O. P. Political Film Features Assault of Nuns by Mex Bandits.

woven a love story lightly through the historical incidents. The story was that of a young girl engaged to a young man suddenly ordered to the border. He is killed and she enters a convent.

All Based on History.

"Villa sees her and becomes enamored of her," explained Reid. "Villa and his men enter the convent and the sisters run away. I show the Mexicans pursuing them, catching and dragging them into the brush, where they are assaulted."

"Is there any authority for that scene?" Reid was asked.

"I have used no incident in this that is not based on history," he replied. "I have used the incidents that Col. Roosevelt has spoken about and written about many times, and which have never been contradicted. You can't deny history. I have used in the story incidents that Mr. Wilson himself referred to in the letter he sent to Carranza. Here wait a minute." Turning to his typewriter Reid wrote the following and handed it to the reporter: "Had I taken into my consideration the letter to Carranza in which he recited to Carranza the outrages perpetrated in Mexico in which he said I have given you 47 reasons why I could have intervened, I could have made a thousand real pictures with Mr. Wilson as the scenario writer."

No Such Sentence in Note.

Reid presumably meant to the note sent to Carranza on June 20, not by Mr. Wilson, but by Sec'y of State Lansing. A perusal of this document fails to disclose any reference whatever to 47 incidents, though the note does state that the government of the United States would have no difficulty in finding "during this period of revolution and disorder many plausible arguments for intervention in Mexican affairs."

The interruption broke the chronology of Reid's photoplay recital. It was recalled that he had been speaking of the assault on the nuns. "Oh, yes," he continued, "then immediately I flash on the screen the picture of Mr. Wilson asleep at his desk. You see the connection."

"Another Incident" Introduced.

said Reid, "is the raid on Columbus. This depicts a family of Americans on the porch of a house. There are a father, mother and little child. A Mexican rushes up and shoots the child, who falls dead behind her mother."

"Then again," said Reid, "I show the president asleep at his desk. Reid's narrative was frequently broken into by himself. He told his own views of the political situation, of his close friendship for Col. Roosevelt, and of his knowledge of incidents in Washington that have had effect on the president's cabinet."

Then Mrs. Reid came in and the information was conveyed that she plays the part of the nun who is in love with the soldier, and who later attracted the attention of Villa.

Nun Ends Her Life.

What happens to her Reid was asked; "Oh," he replied, "there is a scene in the brush. She has no revolver and so she seizes Villa's and shoots herself." Reid did not say at this point that he again flashed on the screen the picture of Pres't Wilson asleep.

The playwright said that in his picture he showed the house at Richmond Hill, L. I., in which Huerta lived after he was driven out of Mexico. "It's a palace," he said.

Reid admitted the fact that the president permitted to learn when the first public reproduction of Reid's photoplay is to be made, for the reason that arrangements are not completed, but Reid is authority for the statement that it would be made under "marvelously splendid" circumstances, and Mr. Colby joyously announced that as soon as it had been accepted from Reid a special view would be given to newspaper men.

"I shall turn the picture over to the committee on Monday," Reid said. "It is finished."

Information is to the effect that Reid is to be paid $35,000 for his work and that film, Reid, at the close of the interview in his office, was asked how the picture ended.

"At the end," he said, quite impressively, "I throw on the screen a picture of Mr. Hughes. Underneath are just two words, 'The Cure.'"

MISHAWAKA PERSONALS.

Mr. and Mrs. A. S. Winey are in Chicago.

William Ipes, has returned to Indianapolis after visiting with his father, Peter Ipe.

Mrs. Irene Kelley has gone to Plymouth, to spend a week with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel E. Holstein of Chicago are enjoying a week's vacation with relatives here.

Mrs. Ernest Bauvans returned from Three Oaks, Mich., where she spent a two weeks' vacation.

Mrs. J. R. Waldrer and two children have returned from Morris, Ill., where they visited with the former's parents, Rev. and Mrs. C. W. Wade.

These "still" photographs to be used in advertising of the republican national committee's new photoplay, are quite interesting.

One of them shows a nun, "Mrs. Reid," at her devotions; another shows the pseudo Carranza; a third scene on the porch after the raid at Columbus.

The motion pictures were taken near New York. Some of them are prepared at a studio at Cliffside, N. J. The "Mexican" scenes were photographed in the neighborhood of Sheephead bay, just north of Plum Island, where there is a stretch of brush and scrub cedars. "You wouldn't know it from a Mexican location," said Reid with glee. Other pictures were taken at Rockaway Point—the Vera Cruz.

State Committees to Show Them.

When Reid was asked what arrangements had been made for distributing these pictures throughout the country, he said the matter had been one of deep concern to the national committee, but he had proposed a solution.

"No regular exhibitors will show a picture of this kind," he said,—and this was later verified emphatically by Samuel H. Trigger, a director of the Motion Picture Exhibitors' league of America—"so I hit on the plan of having the committee distribute the pictures through the state committees in the different states."

Mr. Colby, as Chairman Wilco's representative, was present at the photographing of a number of the scenes that go to make up Reid's "Watchful Waiting." He admitted as much when questioned as to the movie plans of the republican national committee, he being in charge of that branch of the committee's activities with M. D. Metcalfe as his chief assistant.

"It's a corker," said Mr. Colby, referring to the Reid film. "I think it will make a great hit. We are going to distribute it to the committees in the states, sending them perhaps a dozen reels each. Then they will send them about the state and the picture will be shown at republican meetings or in the theaters that they get, or at open air meetings. The picture isn't ready yet entirely, but I have seen a good part of it."

And Mr. Colby Approved.

"And you approved of what you have seen?"

"Oh, yes, indeed," said Mr. Colby, enthusiastically.

It had been planned that the Universal Film Manufacturing corporation should produce the republican national committee's offering. Vice Pres't Cochrane and P. A. Powers, treasurer of the Universal, were sought out. "Yes, we know about the film," said Mr. Cochrane. "I just told Reid that I don't care to see it."

"Were you asked to produce it?"

"No. Mr. Powers can tell you what happened. It was because of that film that we fired Reid."

"We were doing business with the republican national committee," explained Mr. Powers, and Reid went over there very often for us to get staff for our weekly. While over there he fixed up the deal for this picture for himself, telling them we had a picture here that could be used for the attack on Columbus. You know the sort of thing; it could be used for the attack on Columbus or any old place. When we found out about it we let him go."

"Was that because of anything in the picture?"

"Oh, no," he replied. "Just because he had made this arrangement for himself while over there on our own business. Of course, we couldn't produce a picture like that, because we don't show political pictures—that is, unless we give both sides, or the arguments of both sides."

It was impossible to learn when the first public reproduction of Reid's photoplay is to be made, for the reason that arrangements are not completed, but Reid is authority for the statement that it would be made under "marvelously splendid" circumstances, and Mr. Colby joyously announced that as soon as it had been accepted from Reid a special view would be given to newspaper men.

"I shall turn the picture over to the committee on Monday," Reid said. "It is finished."

Information is to the effect that Reid is to be paid $35,000 for his work and that film, Reid, at the close of the interview in his office, was asked how the picture ended.
